

Fostering Innovation at the Workplace for WSH Professionals

Synopsis

The society we live today is ever-changing. Hence, more organisations are looking into ways to expand their creativity so as to be sustainable. In order to keep up and be on pace with the society, it is vital to understand what is required to be in an innovative organisation. Also, how can we contribute to the development of the organisation by adopting the appropriate strategies in order to identify opportunities for innovation.

This program will allow learners to understand what is required to be in an innovative organisation. They will learn to contribute to the development of a learning organisation effectively by applying the appropriate techniques. Learners will also learn useful tactics on analyzing workplace performance and processes to identify opportunities for innovation.

Objectives:

By the end of the course, participants will be able to:

- Define what it means to be an innovation organization
- Contribute to the development of a learning organization
- Analyse workplace performance and processes to identify opportunities for innovation
- Support enterprise behavior and risk taking within your team to foster innovation

Who should attend

Business Owners, Managers, WSH Professional and anyone who is interested to identify opportunities for innovation at the workplace.
